Congratulations to the Award Winners at the 103rd Green Bay Art Colony exhibit at the Neville Museum! The exhibit title is Anything Spectacular Will Do.

Green Bay, WI – February 9, 2018 – Four regional artists received Artistic Merit Awards at the Green Bay Art Colony's 103rd exhibition Anything Spectacular Will Do at the Neville Public Museum on Friday, February 9, 2018.

This year's juror, Shannon Piette, is Executive Director of the Richeson School of Art & Gallery in Kimberly, Wisconsin. Shannon chose the artwork included in this exhibition from entries submitted by the Art Colony's membership.

The award winners include:

1. Helen Carpiaux, Nautilus Two – sculpture.

This sculpture was carved out of wonderstone, which comes from South Africa and is similar to soapstone to work with. "The peaceful fluid movement of this sculpture cannot be overlooked. Not only is this piece technically well executed in the cleanliness of the carving and professional presentation, but the skill of the artist is evident in the design of the piece as a whole", noted the juror.

2. Barb Teerlinck, First Buck - oil painting. "The artist was mindful of each aspect of the painting from the foreground to the middle ground to the background, accentuating the subject to create a successful composition. Confident handling of the paint", noted the juror.

3. Naomi Moes-Jenkins, Blue Boy - paper maché sculpture. Naomi's process incorporates both sculpting and carving. "The intentional exaggeration of key anatomical features highlights the artist's familiarity with the subject and trained eye in design. I kept cycling back and getting lost in the regal feel of the piece. Very skillfully done", noted the juror.

4. Danica Zawieja, Notre Guard – black and white photograph. "The high contrast of this monochromatic photograph gives the artwork a three-dimensional seal on a two-dimensional setting, the overall finish of the piece as well as the image itself make this artwork one work looking at", noted the juror.

Club president Mary Ann Huguet gave a short speech at the reception, congratulating everyone on an excellent show this year.

Anything Spectacular Will Do will be on exhibit at the Neville Public Museum through April 2, 2018.

The Green Bay Art Colony, founded in 1915, is the oldest art group in Green Bay. Their goal as a woman's organization is to promote the arts in the community through exhibitions and scholarships.
